Passage 1

Questions 1-15

Norwegian food

By BEN CHANG

NEW YORK — Norway is a country in the north of Europe. It is a big country, but it doesn't have a lot of people—only 5.3 million. It is famous for one food: smoked salmon. (Salmon is a kind of fish.) But other Norwegian food is very good, too. Let's look at two examples.

People all around Norway like smørrebrød. The word smørrebrød means “butter-bread” in Norwegian. But smørrebrød isn't butter and bread. It's a sandwich. It can have fish, meat, or cheese. Norwegians have smørrebrød for breakfast with coffee or fruit juice. They always have fish smørrebrød first. Why? It's Norwegian tradition.

Norwegians also like krumkake. They have it at the Christmas holiday, in December. Krumkake is cake. It doesn't have a lot of sugar. But people eat it with fruit, like apples, cherries, and cloudbERRIES. Krumkake is sweet because of the fruit. It is a very healthy way to finish your dinner. (OpenAI, 2024)

Laptops at Stanford

Stanford University is an old university in California. It is beautiful, with red and white Spanish-style buildings and tall palm trees. It is also big. There are 17,000 students at Stanford—and all of them have laptops.

Laptops are computers. They aren't big. You don't need a table to use a laptop. You can take a laptop to class—or to the beach. It's easy to use a laptop. A lot of different companies make laptops, like Apple, Samsung, and HP.

Stanford students like laptops. They use them to study, do homework, and write research papers. Of course, a lot of Stanford students also use laptops to look at websites, go shopping online, and play video games.

Technology is very important for Stanford students. Why? Well, Stanford is in Silicon Valley. Silicon Valley is a place with a lot of technology companies, like Apple and Facebook. A lot of Stanford students want to work for Apple. (OpenAI, 2024)
